Labor Legislation in Ohio.

Two highly important bills in the interest of labor have been passed by the general assembly of Ohio. One of them, the Reynolds child labor bill, limiting the hours of work to male children under eighteen to eight hours a day or forty-eight hours a week and absolutely prohibiting all children under fourteen years from working at any time, was vigorously opposed by the manufacturers of the state employing child labor in departments. The other bill, known from the name of its author, Representative Metzger of Cleveland, places upon the statute books of Ohio recommendations of President Theodore Roosevelt concerning the liability of railway servants.

Woman Suffrage in the Unions.

At the recent conventions of the state federations of labor in Connecticut, California and Washington declarations in favor of woman suffrage were made. California and Connecticut had previously taken such action, but this is the first time for Washington. The recent Detroit convention of the International Union of Bricklayers and Stonemasons also adopted a woman suffrage resolution.

Argentina.

Argentina, now the Argentine Republic, owes its name to the silvery reflection of its rivers.

Cheshire Cheese.

Cheshire cheese owes its excellence partly to geological causes, the red sandstone and boulder clay, with its immense salt deposits, of which the country is formed, producing a herbage peculiarly suited for cheese production.

Onion Eaters.

The women of Bermuda, eating onions plentifully, have the finest complexions in the world.

Pineapple Juice.

An old pineapple grower tells strange stories about the effect of the juice of the fruit upon certain substances. The juice of the pine is supposed to do more for the lunny than anything else in the world. Says the grower, "Drop a piece of leather into a glass of pineapple juice and see how quickly it will be eaten up."

Mother-of-pearl.

Mother-of-pearl should never be washed with soap, for it discolors and destroys the brilliancy of the shell. The right method of cleaning is with whitening and cold water.

A CASE OF RAPID PROMOTION.

(Original.)

When Alexis Niederhoff was drafted into the Russian army there was great weeping and wailing on the part of two families, his own and that of his betrothed, Olga Samin. This was during the reign of Peter the Great, who was at the time going to war, and the young conscript was not likely to return.

"Well," said Alexis as he bade them goodbye, "anyway, I will make a soldier of myself. If I am told to march up to certain death I will go. If the officers tell me to do things, no matter how absurd, I will do them. I have no desire to live now that I am separated from home and Olga, and I care not how soon I am killed."

Alexis went off to a barracks to be turned into a soldier. His commanding officer had no need to lecture him as to the importance of obedience, for Alexis' determination to make a military machine of himself only grew stronger with his absence from home. When he had been drilled till he could march by the flank or wheel or double quick as if worked by springs, instead of being sent to the front to be shot he was sent with his regiment to do guard duty at the czar's palace.

One day Alexis was stationed inside the palace with a beat past a door which he was told to guard.

"In there," said his captain, "is his majesty the emperor. Do not permit any one to enter."

"Not any one?"

"That is the order. See that it is obeyed."

The officer had scarcely left when Prince Menschikoff, the czar's favorite minister, came up and made straight for the door of the czar's apartment.

"You can't go in there!" shouted Alexis, placing himself in the minister's way.

"You fool! I am allowed free access to his majesty at all times."

"That makes no difference to me since I have been instructed to let no one pass."

"You impudent hound!" exclaimed Menschikoff. "I'll teach you respect for your betters." And, raising his cane, he brought it down on the soldier's shoulders.

Thwack, thwack, thwack, thwack! Suddenly the door opened, and there stood the czar. His minister was before him, and he received the blowers bolt upright with his musket at "present."

"What's this?" asked the czar.

"This fellow denies me admittance to your majesty's presence," said Menschikoff.

The czar looked at the soldier, who did not open his mouth, still standing with his musket at "present."

"Well, come in," said the czar. Menschikoff entered, and the two were engaged for an hour upon business of state. When the minister made his exit Alexis had been relieved and another man put in his place.

That evening shortly before the lights were put out at the barracks Alexis received a summons to the palace. He felt sure that the minister had received from the czar permission to inflict upon him some terrible punishment. Indeed, he expected to be reprimanded, then taken out and shot.

"It doesn't matter," he said. "They have insisted on making a soldier of me against my will, and I am a soldier. What is a soldier for but to die?"

When he reached the palace he was taken into a large room, at one end of which he saw Menschikoff and the czar talking together. Peter held in his hand a cane, which he gave to Alexis who he came up and, pointing to the minister, said:

"This man struck you this morning; return the blow with my stick."

Menschikoff was astonished. "Does your majesty mean that? Surely you don't intend that a private soldier shall strike your minister?"

"That would not be right, I admit," said Peter. "I therefore make him a captain."

"But I am an officer in your majesty's household."

"I'll make him a colonel of my life guards and an officer of my household."

"But I am a general."

"And so he is. I appoint him to that rank. You see I will not permit you to be struck by one of inferior rank."

That ended Menschikoff's protests, for there was nothing more to say. The czar motioned Alexis to begin, and the newly made general laid on the stick till the czar, who was greatly amused, signified him to desist. Then Alexis was dismissed, and the officer who had brought him was instructed to see that he was lodged for the night at the palace in a manner becoming his station.

The next day Alexis was officially notified of his appointment to the various offices named by the czar. He was most anxious to go home and acquaint Olga with the good news, so he applied for a leave. It was at once granted, and as soon as he could get fitted with a general's uniform he started for home. When Olga saw him coming all bespangled with gold lace she thought that he had been killed in battle and this was his wraith coming to mock her, so she straightway swooned. When she came to her lover was bending over her, looking into her blue eyes with his own of the same heavenly hue.

There was great rejoicing in the families that had been so cast down by the conscription, and when Alexis went back to the capital to fill his various positions he took Olga with him.

How he managed to perform the duties of these positions has not been handed down to us, but we know that he and his wife founded a family that took high rank in Russian affairs.

The Mushroom's Life.

The mushroom's life is measured by hours, but it flourishes long enough for an insect to hang its egg on the edge of the "umbrella" and for the egg to become an insect ready to colonize the next mushroom that springs up.

There can be no discounting the heroism of King Alfonso. He not only went to Barcelona in defiance of anarchist warnings, but he drives his own motor car.

It is reported at Honolulu that the crown prince of Japan will make his long contemplated tour of America and Europe the coming summer. Professor Beltzong has been recalled from Germany to accompany the crown prince.

It is to be hoped that Queen Amelle will be spared the brooding melancholy that has settled down on the other royal widow of an assassinated sovereign, Queen Margherita. Since the death of King Humbert she spends most of her time incognito in her automobile and is never known to smile.

The dowager queen of Portugal, Maria Pia, still retains marks of great beauty. In her youth she was famous as one of the handsomest women on the continent. For years she has been the arbiter of dress in Portugal and in her early womanhood was known as the best dressed queen in Europe.

A Simple Fire Extinguisher.

In German varnish factories an easy way to extinguish a burning pan of oil has been found in the use of a fine meshed wire net. As soon as this covers the burning surface the iron wires conduct off the heat so rapidly that the gases can no longer flame. It is the principle of the Davy safety lamp and might be employed in various ways to extinguish burning gases.

The Corsicans.

Even today Corsicans wish good fortune to a newly born in the ominous words, "May you fall a victim to the gun," and those who perish in vendetta struggles are honored as national heroes.

Fish as Turtle Catchers.

A curious mode of catching turtles is practiced in the West Indies. It consists in catching a ring and a line to the tail of a species of sucker fish, which is then thrown overboard and immediately makes for the first turtle he can spy, to which he attaches himself. The fisherman then hauls both turtle and sucking fish in.

Old Clay Pipes.

The British museum contains a very full collection of clay pipes, dating back as far as the sixteenth century. The custom of waxing the pipe end, to prevent it sticking to the lips, was introduced by the Dutch about the year 1700.
